What makes it stand out:

At this firm, the conference table hangs from the ceiling, upside down. The result: employees have more leg room, and it creates an opportunity to think about the use of space. Firm owner Randall J. Kipp says the table can be seen from the glass front walls of his office. "So it becomes for me an ad." Kipp likes to take a modernistic approach to residential and commercial architecture.

The bold, orange/red chairs and overhead sculpture finishes the dramatic effect.
